EVENTS FOR TOMORROW

Doings, Dinners and Other Matters of Public Interest.

SERVICES IN THE CHURCHES

President Cleveland and His Wife Will Hear Dr. Talmage's Sermon—Theaters Will Give Special Matinees and There Will Be Football Games Galore.

The American eagle gives way tomorrow to the turkey and the crow.

The one will be the dish of the people and the other will be food for the politicians who went under during the recent landslide.

Tomorrow the glories of patriotism will give way to the pangs of indignation, but nobody will on that account forego their assaults on the juicy barnyard fowl.

It has been decreed by the head of the nation, the chief of the commonwealth and director of municipal affairs, that on Thursday, November 28, the people of the land are to look back on all the good that has come this way during the year and observe the day as one of universal thanksgiving.

It requires but little urging on the part of any one to induce the men of the present to take a holiday, especially when such an occasion has been made a national institution, and is looked forward to with expectation.

It being a legal holiday, the national and municipal departments will suspend operations for the day, and the officials be given an opportunity to ruminate.

WHAT THEY WILL DO.

President Cleveland and his family will spend the day at home according to their present programme. The Chief Executive and his family will attend the First Presbyterian Church where Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage will preach the Thanksgiving sermon. This will be the first morning sermon Dr. Talmage has preached since he was installed as co-pastor of the church.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Olney will eat their Thanksgiving dinner at home and will probably have a few friends with them.

Secretary and Mrs. Carlisle will also have a few friends to dine with them.

Secretary and Mrs. Hoke Smith will have an old-time Southern Thanksgiving at their home.

Secretary and Mrs. Lamont will dine at home.

Secretary and Miss Morton will dine with some friends.

Postmaster General and Mrs. Wilson and Attorney General and Mrs. Harmon will spend the day quietly.

Secretary Herbert will also dine at home. Whether they will have a turkey dinner Thanksgiving Day or not is a question that is now agitating the minds of the heads of many of the poorer classes in this city.

From the preparation now being made it would seem that the charitable institutions of the city are trying to see that every poor family that does not have the price of the turkey will get one.

At the Central Union Mission it has been the custom for years to send 1,000 families, who were unable to buy it, a Thanksgiving dinner.

The families are not given the dinner already prepared, but are furnished a basket containing the raw material for one of the old-fashioned dinners. The dinner given this class of people consists of chicken or turkey, according to the size of the family, a half peck of potatoes, one pound of butter, one dozen apples, two loaves of bread, one pound of sugar, one pint of beans, a quarter pound of tea, half pound of coffee, and one pound of rice.

The names and addresses of the needy families are furnished by the agents of the union, who are usually on the lookout for cases where the Thanksgiving basket will come in handy for some little time before the day arrives. As these agents of the mission are at work all the year round, and in instances, destitute, it is not at all hard to discover a thousand families in a city with this population this day, to whom a real Thanksgiving dinner is indeed a luxury.

These gifts of dinners are not confined to the poorer class, but are sometimes given to families who are too poor to afford a turkey, even once a year. The work of distribution is all done free of charge.

A FREE DINNER.

The mission has also prepared to furnish a free dinner to 500 people at the mission building on Louisiana avenue northwest. There will be 500 tickets distributed, and in order that the poor of the city are not crowded out, 400 tickets will be given to the local poor. One hundred of the cards of admission will be retained at the mission and given to the people who drift in during the feast.

Warden Leonard's boarders at the Eastern Branch Hotel, or, as it is better known, the jail, will also have a change from their regular fare of "Potomac roasts." The menu for tomorrow will include turkey. Of course, the men who remain the guests of the warden, simply because they cannot get away, will not be permitted to choose white or dark meat, as they wish.

It will simply be a case of take what you get. The addition of the Thanksgiving bird to the bill of fare at the jail will undoubtedly cause considerable rejoicing, as it is a delicacy that seldom figures on the list as a steady diet at the jail.

The prisoners at the workhouse will also have a dinner given them. A marked change will be observed; the dress suit is tabooed at this institution, and it is expected that Mr. Stantenberg's guests will all appear in a dress of white cloth, with heavy blue stripes running around the figure.

The workhouse diners will also have to dispense with visitors, and no outsiders will be allowed at the dinner. It is a well-known fact, however, that the people confined there are all exclusive, and for thirty, sixty and ninety days seldom mix with the outside world.

At the "Star Hotel" the inmates have to work for their meal, and it is not expected that any of the "star" boarders will object to the age or previous condition of servitude of the turkey prepared for them, although there are a number of fine judges of the bird at the place.

Some of them went there for rest, because it had been such laborious work selecting nice and good subjects out of their neighbors' coops during the dark of the moon.

DAINTIES FOR THE POOR.

The young people of the Fourth Presbyterian Church will furnish a load of Thanksgiving dainties to the inmates of the District poorhouse.

A turkey dinner will be served at the Young Women's Christian Home, on C Street northwest. The people in the home will enjoy an old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner, and one of the features of it will be home-made baked in the ashes.

The inmates of all the orphan asylums and hospitals will also have cause to give thanks, as great preparations are being made to give them all an excellent dinner.

On Thanksgiving evening there will be a turkey shot by the National Guardsmen at their rifle gallery. Capt. Bell is in charge of the arrangements and says that entries are coming in very rapidly. There will be a large number of "marks" to be shot for and it is expected that fully 200 men will participate in the match.

The day will be almost universally observed in the churches with sermons at 11 a. m.

Wash. Methodist Episcopal Church will unite with the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church and other churches in a joint meeting at the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church on Capitol Hill and Rev. Dr. E. Olin Edridge, of Wash. church, will preach the sermon.

There will also be a union Thanksgiving service at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, on Ninth street, in which several of the churches in that section of the city will unite.

A Thanksgiving service from 11 to 12 a. m. will take place at the Church of the Covenant. The congregations of Rev. Dr. Patch and Rev. Dr. Van Arsdale will

GODLOVE ORTH'S WILL.

Extended Litigation Ended and the Will Declared Valid.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 27.—The supreme court has decided that the will of the late Godlove S. Orth of Lafayette must stand.

Orth, who many years ago was one of the leading Republicans of the state, died, leaving a will bequeathing all his property to his second wife.

He left with the will a letter to his wife asking her to allow the child by his first wife as much money as she could spare.

The child did not receive any part of the estate and Godlove Orth's will was set aside on the strength of the letter.

The court holds that, while there was a moral obligation resting on the will, there was no legal obligation which she was bound to respect.

Orth served in Congress many years and was once the nominee for governor, but was withdrawn to make room for Gen. Harrison.

PERKINS' VIEW.

He Declares Against Admission of Cheap Japanese Manufactures.

KNOWING PEACOCK.

Bird Imitates His Mistress and Also Watches Over Chickens.

A Mrs. Harris, living on a small farm in the outskirts of Hamilton, has a handsome peacock named Jupiter. Having no children, she has made quite a pet of Jupiter, and he is in the habit of following her about the yard and farm.

Being on the slope of the mountain, it has been found necessary to terrace the place, and Mrs. Harris herself assisted materially in the work of terracing the front yard by collecting rock and piling it up in convenient places ready for use.

One day, while sitting on the front porch, she observed Jupiter mysteriously pecking at and fro, apparently carrying something in his mouth; after watching for some time she went out and found that he had collected quite a pile of pebbles, of which performance he was obviously proud, spreading his tail and strutting about chucking his satisfaction.

On another occasion, hearing a great noise and cackling in the barn-yard, she ran out to find Jupiter trying with all his might and main to drive the hens with their broods into their respective coops; it was a cloudy, threatening afternoon and the sagacious bird had evidently conceived the idea that the little chicks ought to be under shelter before the rain came—Columbus, Ga., correspondence Philadelphia Times.
